

Fal. You rogue, heeres lime in this sacke too, there is nothing but rogerie to be found in villanous man, yet a coward is worse then a cup of sacke with lime in it. A villanous coward, Go thy waies old Iacke, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot vpon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring: there liues not three good men vnhand in England, & one of them is fat, and growes old, God helpe the while, a bad world I say, I would I were a weauer, I could sing Psalmes, or any thing. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

Prin. How now, Wolfacke, what mutter you?

Fal. A kings sonne: if I do not beate thee out of thy kingdome with a dagger of lath, and driue all thy subiects afore thee like a flocke of wilde geese, ile neuer weare haire on my face more, you Prince of Wales.

Prin. Why you horeson round-man, what's the matter?

Falst. Are you not a coward? answere me to that, and Poinces there.

Poin. Zoundes yee fat paunch, and ye call me coward, by the Lord, ile stab thee.

Falst. I call thee cowarde? ile see thee damnde ere I call thee coward, but I would giue a thousand pound, I could runne as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your backe: call you that backing of your friends? a plague vpon such backing: giue mee them that will face me; giue me a cup of sacke. I am a rogue if I drunke to day.

Pri. O villaine, thy lips are scarce wip't since thou drunkst last.

Falst. All's one for that. He drinketh.

A plague of all cowards still say I.

Prince. What's the matter?

Falst. Whats the matter? here be foure of vs haue tane a thousand pound this morning.

Prince. Where is it? lacke, where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from vs it is: a hundred vpon poore foure of vs.

Prince. VVhat, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a rogue, if I were not at halfe sword, with a dozen of them two houres together. I haue scaped by myracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, foure through the hose, my buckler cut through and through, my sworde hand-saw, ecce signum. I neuer dealt better since I was would not doe. A plague of all cowards, let them speake more or lesse then truerh, they are villaines, and of darkenesse.

God. Speake, firs, how was it?

Rofs. We foure set vpon some douzen.

Falst. Sixteene, at least, my Lord.

Rofs. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, euery man of am a Iew else, and Ebrew Iew.

Rofs. As we were sharing, some 6 or 7. fresh men

Falst. And vnbound the rest, and then come in the Prince. What, fought ye with them all?

Falst. All? I knowe not what yee call all: but if I with fiftie of them, I am a bunch of radish: if the two or three and fiftie vpon poore old Iacke, then a leg'd creature.

Prin. Pray God, you haue not murdered some of Falst. Nay, that's past praying for, I haue pepp them. Two I am sure I haue payed, two rogues in buck I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spitte in my face horse: thou knowest my old ward: here I lay, and my point; foure rogues in buckrom let driue at me.

Prin. What, foure? thou sayd'st but two, euen now

Fal. Foure, Hal, I told thee foure.

Po. I, I, he said, foure,

Fal. These foure came all afront, and mainly the I made no more adoe, but tooke all their seuen points get, thus.

Prin. Seven? why there were but foure, euen now

Fal. In Buckrom.

Poinces. I, foure, in buckrom suites.

Fal. Seuen, by these hilties, or I am a villaine else.

Prin. Prethee let him alone, we shall haue more an

Fal. Doeft thou heare me, Hal?

Prin. I, and marke thee too, Iacke.
